Commitment:

As you may be aware two of the main goals of naturopathic medicine are to prevent disease and to treat the cause of disease rather than just treating a symptom (an example of treating a symptom is taking an aspirin to treat a headache) while this is helpful for acute (short term), conditions; chronic conditions (systemic, long term) such as arthritis, allergies, diabetes, osteoporosis, etc. are not healed by treating the symptoms. The medicines which are often used to treat chronic conditions are usually ways of coping with the symptoms or suppressing the symptoms without addressing the root cause. While this can be helpful to manage severe conditions, there is no actual healing occurring and the process of disease may be advancing or affecting other body systems.

Healing is a process which takes time. This can vary depending on how fast the body heals - in my experience the process can be anywhere from 2-3 years. This does not mean that no change in a person's condition will occur until then. There will be significant symptomatic relief that will occur much sooner than this, however the KEY is to remember that we are NOT TREATING THE SYMPTOMS.

Keeping this in mind how much are you willing to commit to your health – please check one of the following?

I am not willing to make any dietary changes nor taking any of the recommended treatments

I am willing to follow some of the advice given to me here (ex. taking some of the recommended treatments or following some of the recommendations of a restricted diet)

I am willing to make all the dietary changes necessary, and also take the treatments necessary

If your M.D. recommends that you stop the naturopathic prescriptions and treatments recommended to you, you would – please check one of the following:

Stop all naturopathic prescriptions immediately

Consult with my naturopathic doctor and make a decision based on both recommendations

Lifestyle is something that affects our health. The way we eat, sleep, how we cope with stress, exercise etc. Keeping in mind how lifestyle affects your health please check one of the following:

I am not willing to change much of my lifestyle

I am willing to change some of the factors in my lifestyle that are needed to improve my present condition

O I am interested in changing those lifestyle factors which are needed to improve my present condition and also those that are detrimental to my future health.

Naturopathic Medicine is the treatment and prevention of disease by natural means. Naturopathic Doctors assess the whole person, taking into consideration physical, mental, emotional and spiritual aspects of the individual. Gentle, non-invasive techniques are generally used in order to stimulate the body's inherent healing capacity.

A number of different approaches may be used throughout the course of treatment. Treatment modalities include: diet, nutritional supplements, botanical medicine, homeopathy, Asian medicine and acupuncture, hydrotherapy, physical medicine, and lifestyle counselling.

Individual diet and nutritional supplements are recommended to address deficiencies, treat disease processes, and promote health. The benefits may include increased energy, increased gastrointestinal function, improved immunity, and general well-being.

Botanical medicine is a plant based medicine that involves the use of herbal teas, tinctures, capsules, and other forms of herbal preparations to assist in recovery from injury and disease.

Homeopathy is a form of medicine based on the Law of Similars – that is, the use of tiny doses of the very thing that causes symptoms in healthy people. These minute doses of plant, animal, or mineral origins are used to stimulate the body's ability to heal itself. Homeopathy is a powerful tool that effects healing on a physical and emotional level.

Asian medicine includes the use of acupuncture, Eastern herbs and dietary changes to eliminate disease and balance body functions. Acupuncture refers to the insertion of sterilized disposable needles through the skin into underlying tissues at specific points on the body. Eastern herbs may be given in the form of pills, tinctures, or decoctions (strong teas) to be taken internally or used externally as a wash. Dietary advice is based on traditional Chinese medical theory.

Physical medicine refers to the use of hands-on techniques such as soft tissue, and spinal manipulation for the purpose of treating musculoskeletal and neurological problems.

Hydrotherapy refers to the use of hot and cold water applications to improve circulation and stimulate the immune system.

Lifestyle counselling involves identifying risk factors and making recommendations to help optimize one's physical, mental and emotional environment.

During your initial visits, your Naturopathic Doctor will take a thorough case history, do a physical examination, and when indicated require blood and urine tests performed within the last 3 months. The physical examination may include more specific examinations such as gynecological (e.g. PAP), rectal, prostate, or genital exams.

Even the gentlest therapies may cause complications in certain physiological conditions (e.g. pregnancy, lactation, very young children, or those taking multiple medications). Some therapies must be used with caution in certain diseases such as diabetes, heart, liver or kidney disease. It is very important, therefore, that you inform your doctor immediately of any disease process that you are suffering from, as well as any medications (prescription or over-the-counter) that you are taking. If you are pregnant, suspect you are pregnant, or you are breast-feeding advise your doctor immediately.

There are some slight risks associated with Naturopathic Medicine. These include but are not limited to:

- Aggravation of pre-existing symptoms
- Allergic reactions to supplements or herbs
- Pain, bruising, or injury from acupuncture
- Fainting or puncturing of an organ with acupuncture needles
- Muscle strains and sprains or disc injuries from spinal manipulation
